MEMBERSHIP

Memberships provide a significant component of the funds necessary to assure the preservation of the House and grounds, as well as the Native cultural and art-related programming benefiting the Central Oklahoman art community and University of Oklahoma students. Membership fees are tax deductible, and members enjoy great benefits as listed on the opposite page.

MISSION

The Oscar Jacobson Foundation, through the Jacobson House Native Art Center and legacy of the Kiowa Six and Oscar Jacobson, engages the power of Native American art to create a cross-cultural bridge among diverse peoples through educational exhibitions, programs, and events celebrating Native American cultures.

FOUNDATION

In 1986, the Jacobson Foundation incorporated as a nonprofit 501(c)3 organization, and the Jacobson House was placed on the National Register of Historic Places, due to its architecture and unique role in the evolution art in Oklahoma. Now on the Oklahoma Historical Society's Landmarks List, the house is documented with a state historical marker. Arrell Morgan Gibson, the Oklahoma historian, referred to the Oscar Jacobson legacy as "a preservation imperative."
